First In Line

Exposed Knees Knock 37 Girls From School

Brentwood, N. Y., (AP) — Brentwood High School officials have cracked down on girls' exposed knees, with 37 students being suspended for too-high hemlines.

Warnings didn't seem to do any good, so girls whose skirts were worn too short were sent earlier this week from their classes to the principal's office. The owners of the 37 pairs of knees were sent home for two days. Some of the girls may return today, and the remainder tomorrow.

High school vice principal Harvey S. Brickman said last night that he had received phone calls from a few late mothers. "But in general," he added, "nearly all the parents are with us."

Brickman noted that the suspended girls don't have a leg to stand on, since a skirt-length ruling was drafted last spring with the aid of the student council, and the decision appears in the student handbook. The handbook states that skirts go no higher than mid-knee.

Many fashion experts say the current style puts hemlines just below the kneecap. A few fashion houses draw the line at mid-knee, and no higher.

Said Brickman: "Of course, many mothers look over their daughters before they leave for school, and their hemline lengths are all right. But some girls, after they get to school, roll up their skirts at the waist which, of course, makes them that much shorter."

When the "roll-up" girls are disciplined by their teachers,

Brickman said, "by the time they get to the office the skirts are down."

Concerning the record number of suspensions, Brickman said teachers have been warning the high-hemline girls since the beginning of the school term in this Long Island community.

YMCA INITIATES GROUP TO PROMOTE CIVIC NEED

The University YMCA is now in the process of initiating a Civic Service Organization for the purpose of doing community service projects.

The organization is open to all campus groups, organizations, and individuals who are interested in doing any community service, either presently or in the near future.

A Steering Committee has been formed and it is in the process of carrying out the proposed projects of the organization.

There will be projects for underprivileged children, recreational group activities for children.

Hanging of Greens

The cast for the Hanging of the Greens will hold a dress rehearsal at 5 p.m. Monday in the Student Union Ballroom.

Tourneys Send Debaters To Indianapolis, Richmond

Two UK debate teams, consisting of 16 members, will attempt to regain their winning form in Indianapolis, Ind., and Richmond this weekend.

Indianapolis is the site for the Butler University Novice Tournament. UK will have Stanley Craig, Phil Grogan, Julia Blyton, and Ronald Elswick debating the affirmative.

The negative debaters are Richard Ford, Donald Clapp, Victor Day, and Paul Osborne.

Five Kentucky colleges, including UK, will debate for the championship in the Eastern Kentucky State College Round Robin at Richmond. Arguing for the affirmative will be Susan Shelton, Ben Wright, Antonio Lennos, and Eberhard Zopp.

On the negative side are Jo Hern, Warren Scoville, Nancy Loughridge, and Paul Chelgren.

The first of four world population lectures will be given by a man who has spent his life studying the census and population trends.

Dr. Philip Hauser, head of the Department of Sociology at the University of Chicago, will speak on "World Population Perspectives" at 7 o'clock tonight at the Taylor Education Building Auditorium.

The sociologist is speaking in conjunction with the lecture series on the "World Population Situation and Its Implications" sponsored by the Patterson School of Diplomacy and International Commerce, the College of Commerce, and the Department of Sociology with the assistance of Phi Beta Kappa.

Other lectures in the series will be Dec. 7 and 12 and Jan. 5.

As acting director of the U.S. Bureau of the Census, Dr. Hauser is mainly responsible for the recent thorough polling. He has studied and worked with the census as assistant chief statistician of population and as assistant director and deputy director of the bureau.

Dr. Max Wasserman of the Patterson School of Diplomacy, who worked with Dr. Hauser in Washington, D.C., feels that the secret of his success is his sheer ability.

"He is so capable," Dr. Wasserman said, "that he can afford to be nice to everyone without stepping on them or pulling political strings."

The department head's most recent article appeared in the Nov. 10 issue of Look magazine.

Among his books are "Population Perspectives," "Population and World Politics," "Government Statistics for Business Use," and "Workers on Relief in the United States."

Chairman of the Social Science Research Council's Committee on Urbanization, Dr. Hauser received his Ph.D. in sociology from the University of Chicago. He has also worked in office program planning in the U.S. Department of Commerce.

A dinner was given by the sociology faculty for Dr. Hauser yesterday. Afterward he spoke to Alpha Kappa Delta, sociology honorary.

Campus Cruisers Get Radio Units

Nearly $4,000 worth of short-wave radio equipment was installed in two campus police cruisers early this week, said Clyde Lilly, chief clerk of the University Maintenance and Operations.

Lilly explained that the primary reason for the new equipment is to aid in the protection of students and property.

The Motorola radio system is a transistor unit operating on a high-band frequency from a 125-foot antenna located on top of the M&O Building.

More specifically, the radio unit, with a range of 22 miles, will be used in case of fire, tornadoes, or even war, the chief clerk said.

Lilly said that before the installation of the radio system, if a policeman saw a fire while cruising the campus, he had to get out of the car, go to the nearest telephone, and call the Fire Department.

With the radio units, a fire could be discovered and the short-wave station notified, which in turn would notify the Fire Department in less than one minute.

The Campus Police now have two mobile units and one auxiliary unit. However, Lilly said they hope to extend the number of units in the near future.

Chief Clerk Lilly added, "The unit also has the Conelrad band and receives Civil Defense signals immediately."

The system, which can be expanded to 30 units, will be extended to Maintenance trucks to eliminate the drivers having to either call or return to the Maintenance Building for new assignments. Lilly feels this will save a great deal of time and expense.

Engineering Students

All students registered in the College of Engineering must see their advisers between Dec. 4 and Dec. 16 in regard to their programs of courses for the second semester. Brown cards will be available in departmental offices.

World News Briefs

'Non-Nuclear Club' Sought

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 30 (AP)—Over Western objections, the U.N. Political Committee today called for action to organize a "non-nuclear club" of nations pledged not to acquire, build or stockpile atomic or hydrogen bombs.

The United States and most of its North Atlantic allies voted against the move for fear it might affect NATO's nuclear defenses against Soviet attack.

The resolution spearheaded by Sweden with Soviet and neutralist backing, was passed by a vote of 57-12, with 32 abstentions. This assures ratification by the General Assembly later.

Demonstrations Cost Life

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Nov. 30 (AP)—Violent demonstrations against President Joaquin Balaguer's government cost a youth's life today as tank supported troops and police hurled tear gas and noise bombs to break up the mob that surged right up to the gates of the national palace.

The rioting was the worst yet of the three-day strike. Crowds poured into the streets when a rumor spread that Balaguer had resigned. The palace denied the report.

New Name For New Guinea

HOLLANDIA, Dutch New Guinea, Dec. 1 (AP)—This controversial land of jungle and mountains—which drew worldwide attention recently with the search for missing Michael Rockefeller—changed its name today to West Papua and flew a brand new flag.

The new look, which is not official until the rule books are changed at the Hague, was initiated by the Papuans themselves. But the Dutch were quick to seize upon it to advance a program of self-determination.

In Amsterdam, Dutch Foreign Minister M. A. H. Luns said new measures will be taken in the coming months to promote Papuan emancipation.

It was a holiday all over the western part of the world's second largest island, with flag-raising ceremonies, singing of the new country's anthem, and patriotic speeches.

Churchill, 87, Celebrates

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Sir Winston Churchill, blinking back tears of emotion, celebrated his 87th birthday today with his family and in the affection of the parliament he roused to fighting fervor during World War II.

The old warrior fortified himself with a luncheon of oysters, a big cigar and nips from a bottle of fine old brandy, presented by Prime Minister Macmillan, before going to parliament for the welcoming cheers of his colleagues.

Everyone forgot the rules—even the public gallery erupted in applause. Deeply moved by the tributes from all sides of the house, the old man rose slowly to his feet and said simply:

"I am very grateful to the House."

Veteran's Checks

All veterans and war orphans may sign for their checks on Dec. 1, 2, and 4. Signing dates for January are Jan. 3, 4, and 5.

It's easy to feel that way when you can't seem to get ahead of financial woes. But, things probably aren't as bad as they seem.

A good way to begin your financial planning is through life insurance. And a good time to begin is now, when you'll profit by lower premiums. Many new plans and features, especially attractive to college students, deserve your consideration.

Stop by our campus office, or telephone for more information.

The annual decoration of the evergreen tree in the center of sorority row puts everyone in the Christmas spirit as each sorority joins in the festivity. The women helping with the prelim-

Formals, Game Fill Weekend

After all the excitement of Homecoming and Thanksgiving, this weekend is a bit of an anticlimax, but everyone is making a brave attempt to keep things going.

The Alpha Tau Omegas are starting off the weekend with a party for their new little sisters. The men formally announced the chosen few Wednesday night and each little sister was presented with a white rose.

This is the season for formal dances and the Delta Zetas are starting it off with their annual dance which will be held tonight at Tates Creek Country Club.

The Holiday Inn will be the scene of the Phi Gamma Delta's annual White Owl formal tonight.

A more informal dance will be going on at the Wildcat with Joe Mills and The Eldorados providing the music.

Out at Joyland the Sultans will be providing the sounds for the Kappa Kappa Gamma, Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Sigma, and Delta Tau Delta jam session. No doubt many of the other groups on campus will be attending en masse.

A few of the more courageous people will be braving the cold at Gardenside tonight at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon skating party.

Tomorrow night the Wildcats will meet Miami of Ohio in their first home basketball game of the season. The fraternities and their dates will attend in groups and afterwards return to the chapter houses for a series of parties.

Among the fraternities holding open house after the game are the Fijis, Lambda Chi, ATOs, SAEs, ZBTs and the KAs.

For anyone interested in dancing, the Women's Dorm Council will sponsor their weekly dance party after the game in Keeneland Hall.

Men Remain In Uniform

NEW YORK (AP) — No matter how the wind blows in the Berlin crisis, American men will be in military clothes, if heberdashery designer Robert Beach has anything to do with it.

Men have never really gotten out of them anyway, he claims. Beach discounts any suggestion that a former soldier or sailor might be tired of or psychologically depressed by khaki, olive drab, or navy blue. Indeed, using these colors, he is designing a line of suburban clothes based on those created by Uncle Sam's tailor.

"I live in the suburbs and all the men I know out there fish or work in their yards in khakis, sometimes with the pants cut off at the knees," Beach claims. "Or they wear military jackets hunting or sailing."

Because from 10 to 20 years have passed since many American men were issued their last government wardrobe, Beach figured some items surely must have worn out enough to need replacing. (He is also influenced by the number of American travelers who buy military looking men's wear in Europe.)

Thus Beach's suburban clothes in poplins and chino cloth have plenty of epaulets, straps, knit belts and slide buckles for realism. The line is already extremely successful, Beach claims, except for one item.

Because men seemed to like them for boating, Beach faithfully copied a navy blue chief petty officer's jacket. But competition from Army and Navy surplus stores was too keen.

A Step Backward

The last six years have been revolutionary years for the University. Our former fame as "Country Club of the South" has slipped and given way to a hard-earned reputation that ranks us among the scholastically elite universities of the Southeastern Conference.

But now, enter, the Lexington Quarterback Club. That fire-breathing, football-loving group of alumni is clamoring for UK to take an academic nose dive back into the "Country Club" days.

The members of the Quarterback Club clearly realize that many top out-of-state football prospects are not in the upper 50 percent of their high school graduating classes, as the UK admission standard now requires. And they have a simple remedy for that painful situation. Lower the requirements.

The Quarterback Club does not venture to suggest how requirements should be lowered—its members simply urge the University to put the Wildcats in a competitive position with other teams in the conference.

But sports writers in the state seem ready to pick up the battle where even the Quarterback Club fears to tread. A Louisville scribe wrote that "speculators" were saying each Board of Trustees member might be empowered to "appoint" one out-of-state student to UK, regardless of admission rules. Or, should that proposal fail, each state senator could be allowed to appoint one student.

The biased news story of a Lexington Leader reporter quoted a Quarterback Club manifesto as saying, "There are at least seven boys turned down by the University of Kentucky (every year) for scholastic reasons." Then the reporter scribbled this lucidly prophetic comment:

"Although the Quarterback Club didn't say it, if the University continues to lose seven top prospects a year the number would equal 21 every three years."

Bluntly, we cannot endorse the Quarterback Club's request for lowered admission requirements. We have come to the conclusion that the University's purpose must be to produce educated men and women, rather than to turn out nationally ranked football teams. If good education and good teams are in conflict and one must go, without doubt a fast farewell should be bid to good teams.

Nor can we favor the undemocratic method of appointing unqualified students to the University. If admission requirements are relaxed for one or two, they should be relaxed for all.

We would go one step further. Admission requirements for Kentucky students should also be raised. The University can never become the quality institution it hopes to be as long as straight-C high school students are given blanket approval to go on a year's lark at the state University.

Parade, Or Procession?

Thousands of spectators lined Lexington streets Saturday along the Homecoming parade route. They saw queen candidates riding in convertibles and cleverly constructed floats—components of UK's first Homecoming parade in several years.

The parade could have flashed, sparkled, and glittered like most homecoming parades, but, instead, it crept stealthily through downtown Lexington like a funeral procession. The parade, in our opinion, was ineffective because it lacked the vigor and vitality that bands provide.

We understand the Marching 100 at the time, was practicing for its performance at the Homecoming Game. The group must practice to be in good form for their performances, but bands at other schools find time to participate in both a parade and a half-time program. Perhaps the Thanksgiving holiday interrupted the band's normal preparation schedule.

One band would have made a great difference, but it still would not have supplied the lift the parade so badly needed. Some schools invite other bands, usually from high schools, to participate in parades.

Next year, we hope to see another Homecoming parade, this time with queens, floats, and several bands. We hope, too, it will have vitality, vigor, and zest and will not drag so silently and unobtrusively as did this year's Homecoming parade.

Is This Advertising's Role?

The American public more and more is being subjected to a barrage of deplorable advertisements. Movie advertisements seem to be the worst offenders.

In reality, the themes used in advertisements with a "come-on" for movies, in most cases, have little to do with the movies themselves. Often, the movies are not as bad as the illustrations in the ads portray them. Practically every movie advertisement uses a theme of exaggerated sex or violence.

"A World of Vice and Violence—Uncommonly Bold Love Becomes Lust." This is just a meager example of what has been used in movie advertisements recently. Some are more suggestive than this.

There is a great need for a general "house-cleaning" in the advertising business. Indeed, if such suggestive verbiage truly depicts a movie, something should be done about altering the movies. They do more harm than good. It is very possible some of the violent acts being committed every day could be traced to suggestive scenes an offender may have seen in a movie.

It is the responsibility of everyone to see that this filth is not portrayed on the screen and that such advertising is not printed. Everyone should use their influence to have this advertising and these movies cleaned up.

Advertisers use such ads to attract people. If we need this to attract our attention, then our civilization has reached a low point of degradation. For such advertising should appeal only to animals, certainly not to people with intellects.

THE READERS' FORUM

'Support' Proposal

To The Editor:

The things one learns through television! As University of Kentucky alumnae of recent vintage, we've naturally been interested in the progress, or lack of it, in UK athletics. We naively attributed the disastrous seasons of the past several years to numerous factors—poor coaching, player coddling, student apathy, butter fingers.

Now the pundits of the Lexington Quarterback Club tell us that the reason we loyal alums have to hang our heads in shame at the mention of the gridiron Wildcats is because the players aren't stupid enough. Standards for our out-of-state hopefuls are too high—to participate in UK football, one must rank in the upper half of one's high school graduating class. Zounds!

Well, right here and now, we want to cast our votes for changing the standards. Let athletes who graduate in the lower 50 percent of their classes play. Hell, let 'em play if they didn't graduate. After all, it we get too many of these geniuses who've amassed a better than "C" average on the team, who's gonna steal tests?

The Real Reason

The "thanks" of Thanksgiving is missing for many students because it comes right after mid-term grades are posted.

Mid-term grades this year, as every year, are a disappointment to many students and are especially discouraging to some freshmen.

Now that the initial depressed feelings have been drowned during a refreshing holiday, it is time to look at the brighter side and work up a little determination that will carry through the rest of the semester. Mid-term grades rate a little more thanks than some have been willing to give.

Consider this quotation by Arthur W. Newton:

"God of commonsense, I give Thee thanks . . . for the acid blight of failure that has burned out of me all thought of easy victory and toughened my sinews for fiercer battles and greater triumphs; for the mistakes I have made and the lessons I have learned from them."

Small failures often grow out of proportion in our minds and cause us to forget the real reason we are in college.

David Otis, senior art major, is shown with his walnut sculpture on the south side of the Fine Arts Building. He describes the work as relating to musical symbols.

Art Student Does Outdoor Sculpture

David Otis, senior art major, is one of the students responsible for the art work on display outside the Fine Arts Building.

He was singled out by Prof. Raymond Barnhart as one of the outstanding students in the department. Otis has contributed many works displayed in and around the building, including the stained glass on the transom of the back entrance.

This was done with a thin lacquer poured on glass, set in a frame, and then mounted in the transom.

His sculptured piece, which he has not titled, on the south side of the Fine Arts Building was erected last May. He describes the work as an architectural sculpture dealing mainly with symbols of music.

"These symbols can be seen through curves of the wood, and also in the use of cable which signifies any string instrument from the harp to the violin," he said.

Otis explained that when the work was started, he had no idea of the problems which would be involved. When these problems arose, he was forced to seek the help of Maintenance and Operations, especially in stretching the cable.

Three years ago he did a walnut sculpture of a charging animal. Presently he is working on a walnut sculpture relating to music, which will be the form of an archaic instrument about three feet tall. It is less dynamic but more contained than the larger outside sculpture.

Otis, who plans to teach art on the college level, is primarily interested in painting, rather than sculpture. As he is still a student, he found it difficult to look too far ahead, but he said, "I have noticed that my painting is becoming more simple in form. The main thing is to keep painting."

He is working on a series of "atmospheric effects" which he began last spring. Several of his paintings and drawings were in a spring show.

Borge Considers A Plot

NEW YORK (AP)—Victor Borge may make his next visit to Broadway in a show complete with plot, cast of performers, songs and dances.

The comic has been considering a musical comedy built around the experiences of a foreign professor who becomes a whiz at coaching college football.

Borge said of many many bids to appear in musicals, this story line is the first to appeal to him.

Guignol To Present Irish Play

Guignol Theatre will present "Pictures in the Hallway," the second major production of the season, Dec. 6-9.

"Pictures in the Hallway" is a dramatization, first produced in New York by Paul Shyre, of a portion of the famous Irish playwright's autobiography. It follows young O'Casey through his first experiences with women, his first disastrous job, his first brush with death.

Finally he makes his decision to carve his own history in the world rather than standing in hallways looking at other people's pictures.

Because the various episodes demand over 30 different scenes, the play was originally produced as a reading on a bare stage. However, Director Mary Warner Ford, collaborating with Ray Smith, Guignol designer, and Charles Dickens, faculty supervisor of the production, has made the production an unusual blend of concert reading and realistic staging.

A narrator serves to comment on the action and give it continuity. Place locations are indicated by lighting and a stage design of many levels. As each actor plays several roles, only the simplest costume props, such as shawls, caps and jackets, are used.

Principles in the cast are Kent Gravett, a native of Lexington recently graduated from Northwestern University school of drama, as the narrator, and Bill Hayes, Arts and Sciences junior from the Canal Zone, as the young O'Casey.

Others in the cast are Peggy Kelly, Allan Todd, Stephen Atkinson, Alvin Polk, Emmett Moore, Jr., Janice Lowrey, Ray Smith, Nene Carr and Betty Griffith, junior music student who provides the flute accompaniment.

Mary Warner Ford directed last year's Guignol production of "Dark of the Moon" and a number of laboratory theater shows.

Reservations can be made at the Guignol box office in the Fine Arts Building or by calling University Extension 3300. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

Meat Team To Compete

The University of Kentucky meats judging team which tied for first-place national honors this fall in Kansas City will go after international hardware Monday at Madison, Wis.

They will compete with some 25 college and university teams from throughout the world at a contest held in conjunction with the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago. The meats contest is held at Madison.

UK tied for first place as a team at the American Royal in Kansas City in October for the highest finish ever posted by a UK team.

Members of the championship squad all of whom will attend the international contest, are Duane Latham, Hodgenville; Jackie Wilson, Franklin; and Shelby Woodring, Sturgis.

Larry Turley, Sacramento; and Dale Anastasi, Buffalo, N. Y. Team coach is Dr. James D. Kemp, professor of animal husbandry.

Former Students To Be Published In Poetry Volume

Poems by former University students have been accepted for publication in the Annual Anthology of College Poetry.

"Relative Density," by John Martel, and "The Night Birds," by Gayle Hummond will appear in the forthcoming issue.

The anthology is a compilation of poetry from colleges representing every section of the country.

Members of the cast for Guignol Theatre's "Pictures in the Hallway" stop rehearsal for this pose. The Sean O'Casey play is an autobiographical dramatization. The play will run Dec. 6-9.

Departments To Move To Pence, Kastle Halls

What will become of Pence and Kastle Halls when the new chemistry-physics building is completed?

Dr. M. M. White, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, said the buildings will be turned over to the Departments of Sociology and Psychology, but it is not yet known which department will occupy which building.

The new chemistry-physics building is scheduled to open next fall, but no positive moving date has been set for the Sociology and Psychology Departments. Necessary changes must be made to correspond to the specific needs of the departments.

Dean White said the new residences would not increase the enrollments of the departments but would permit the staff and students to work more easily. Soon after Pence and Kastle Halls are evacuated next fall, a work crew will give the buildings a "face-lifting." Changes will be made for better use of office space and laboratories, which are lacking in the Social Sciences and Funkhouser Buildings.

Two new books on Thomas Wolfe indicate a renewed interest in a man whose artistic influence has declined since the thirties when he was one of the most popular writers.

One of the books is a study of his life and work ("Thomas Wolfe: An Introduction and Interpretation" by Richard Walker) and the other is a collection of his short novels, published by Scribners. The former is a kind of supplementary volume to the excellent biography by Elizabeth Nowell published last year. The short novels are largely first drafts of material that later appeared in his longer works. One of the most purely poetic of these is "No Door," which appeared in revision in parts of "Of Time and the River."

The most artistic one is "The Web of Earth," which is better than James Joyce's final forty unpunctuated pages of Ulysses. This is a monologue of Eliza Gant speaking to her son Eugene on a visit to him in New York. Eliza is more believable than Joyce's Molly Bloom, and the North Carolina mountain idioms are perfectly recorded.

Wolfe's recognition as an artist has dwindled in the past twenty years, as people have grown away from their youthful identification with his flamboyant, ecstatic, monstrous style. They have begun to see him with an objectivity that relegates the significance of his youth to a more prominent interest in his defects. They have become critics, seeing things in more sophisticated terms. It has been said by Wolfe's contemporaries that now all they can do is apologize for him.

But they lose something in their process of "maturing." They are undermining the importance of Wolfe, defects or no defects. He knew too much to be an artist. He had too much genius to be able to confine himself to the precise terms of the artist. He could have no such precision—everything was too big. He tried to grasp it all, and seeing it all, he tried to relate all that he saw. He could not accomplish this within set standards and limitations of art. He had so much to say that he had to write furiously, on top of a refrigerator or wherever, in order to say everything as completely as possible, however crude.

As we grow away from our childhood enthusiasm for him (the things he sets down are exact things we have felt—all the nameless, faceless inexplicable concepts) we are likely to lose something of our youth and our intensity, our "tragic sense" of life—our integrity, so to speak. We come to hold on to things and begin to look back on him as a temporary emotional identity. But it should be questioned whether this maturity is worth stifling the exuberant love for life and incessant wonder that Wolfe expressed.

Wolfe is out of place in our age, the poet-critics say, but are not the poets ramifications of his own particular breed, modern expressions of the same thing? His almost biblical prose, the natural rhythm are strangely out of place in our culture, and that is the tragedy of it. For Wolfe expressed hope in the midst of despair, beauty against a sordid background.

We may refer specifically to a story of his, "The Lost Boy," which is one of the most complete things he ever wrote. "The Lost Boy" is not a short story by the writing workshop definition of a short story. But it surpasses those sterile concepts in that it is writing, it is feeling, it is life—mellow and nostalgic and true. Wolfe's books are not novels, they are books, literature—necessitating description and comment in big terms for they are truly big themselves. Surely Thomas Wolfe has grasped life more completely than any writer. From pages of observation of things seen and smelled and felt one feels that all has been said and cannot be said again. In common critical terms Wolfe's faults are admitted. They are obvious. But good writing is that writing which, first of all, is honest and truly meant. And nothing more need be said.

Wolfe was not an artist but he was life, bigger than life.

Wildcats Open Season With Miami Saturday

Coach Adolph Rupp, the maker of champions, puts his thirty-first product on the market tomorrow night when Kentucky opens its 1961-62 basketball season against Miami of Ohio. Game time is 8 p.m. in Memorial Coliseum.

Rupp unveiled his 31st Wildcat basketball model Monday night when he staged a full length scrimmage between the varsity and freshmen cagers in a benefit game. With four more days of practice behind them by the time they take the floor against the Redskins however, the Baron will be driving for his 20th Southeastern Conference crown and 14th NCAA appearance.

A 24 game schedule, including a Christmas tournament, awaits the Wildcats. Ranked 13th nationally in many preseason polls, Rupp thus far has been pleased with the progress made by the cagers in practice.

"I just hope there are only eleven teams better than us," Rupp said on television earlier this week.

When the Wildcats line up for the opening tipoff tomorrow night they will be led by sophomore sensation Cotton Nash. Nash, who broke practically all freshmen records a year ago, has been used at all three positions but will start his first varsity contest as a center.

The only regular returning from Kentucky's NCAA tournament team of last March is senior guard Larry Pursiful. Pursiful, 5-11, 180 pound Four Mile, product, started all games last year after playing in a reserve role as a sophomore.

Gone from the 1960-61 squad are four seniors who helped guide the Cats into the NCAA tournament last March. Roger Newman, Bill Lickert, Ned Jennings, and Dick Parsons are the graduated members of the team.

Other Wildcat starters will include Scotty Baesler at the other guard, and Allen Feldhaus and Roy Roberts at forwards. Carroll Burchett is considered by Rupp as one of his starters although he won't open at a forward.

Baesler and Roberts along with Nash will be the newest faces in the lineup.

While Nash has been tutored as the best sophomore in the nation and Kentucky's next All-America candidate, relatively little has been written or said of Baesler and Roberts.

Baesler, a junior guard from Lexington, is believed to be the first boy from Bryan Station High School to play on a major athletic team here. He played little last season but has come on strong since practice opened in mid-October to gain his starting berth. Baesler possesses good speed and hits from the outside very well.

Roberts, from Atlanta, Ga., is only the third Georgian on a Wildcat cage squad in recent years. The 6-4, 195 pound senior cager came to Kentucky in 1957. He has played very little in the past three years but has convinced Rupp and assistant Harry Lancaster he wants to play this year in his final campaign.

Allen (Horse) Feldhaus, 6-5, 223 pound senior, is the other starter. Feldhaus turned in a good shooting exhibition in Monday's scrimmage when he garnered 12 points.

Miami, tomorrow night's opponent, are led by guard Gerry Saunders and forward Ralph Wright.

Saunders, a 6-2, 170 pound junior, is considered the best shooter on the Redskin team although he lacks speed. The Lebanon, Ohio cager hit an amazing 50 percent from the field in his first varsity campaign a year ago while appearing in 21 games.

Wright, a 22-year-old senior, has been fantastic as a rebounder. He played only sparingly, averaging seven rebounds a game.

In the Kentucky-Miami series, the Wildcats hold a 9-4 edge.

Kentucky will be back in action Monday night when Southern California invades the Coliseum.

The Trojans open the season tonight against Missouri before moving into Lexington over the weekend after a game with Oklahoma Saturday.

Champion of the Big Five last year, with 10 varsity lettermen returning, they are picked by many to repeat the title this winter.

Southern California didn't lose a letterman through graduation and have an All-America center to lead them again this fall.

John Rudometkin, a 6-6 senior, leads the Trojans with a 23 point average and is helped by guard Chris Appel. Appel, a senior, scored at a 13-point game average during the 1960-61 campaign.

Knoxville's Siler Feels Relations At Low Ebb Following Vol Victory

Before turning our attention to the Kentucky basketball season there is some unfinished business concerning the football team which needs to be taken care of.

Tom Siler, sports editor of the Knoxville News-Sentinel, was on the campus for the Kentucky Homecoming game last week and when he returned to Knoxville he took with him not only a smile from the Tennessee victory but an unwarranted frown.

Upon returning to Knoxville, Siler came forward with a few comments this past Monday which indicated he was more than elated over the Volunteer win, their first since 1956. In order to show his feelings the writer turned a critical essay into a news story.

Mr. Siler devoted half of his column to the Kentucky game and put the point forward that the Vol-Wildcat relations are now at their lowest ebb in some time, due to the condition of Stoll Field last Saturday.

In part here are his comments:

"TENNESSEANS were still basking today in the afterglow of a 26-16 conquest of the Kentucky Wildcats, but it is only accurate to report that relations between the two schools are the lowest ebb in many seasons.

"Vol officials were burned to a crisp, a tight-lipped crisp, over the fact that the UK athletic department permitted four high school teams to tear up the playing field in a steady Thanksgiving Day down-pour.

"Most shocking to this observer was the callous disregard for the cash customers, who had invested some $160,000 in the quaint belief that they would be presented a football game under the best possible conditions.

"Vol officials recalled that two years ago Shively's ground crew rolled the field cover toward the CENTER of the field, thereby dumping water down the middle of the field.

"Actually the school is using the Thanksgiving Day gala to recruit players in utter disregard of the fans and a traditional rival.

"AND . . . UK officials gave the brilliant Tennessee band four minutes and 30 seconds to perform before the contest, and that was another sore point. Tennessee picked up a tab of $3,000 for the trip; yet UK could find no spot for the UT band to perform at halftime, only before the game.

"And . . . then Vol visitors were amazed to discover that a single room at the Phoenix Hotel was $16 per night, just twice what it should have been."

"And . . . to cap it all, Adolph Rupp, whose basketball team has not been able to win a title since 1958, shut the practice court door in our face. There was an unconfirmed rumor around the campus that Rupp's boys are working on a new way to make a free throw.

"The next move is up to Tennessee."

As you can see by the article he left few stones unturned.

Most Wildcat partisans were willing to forget the football season early in the third period after Coach Bowden Wyatt's Vols had jumped out in front by three touchdowns but this editorial more than deserves a reply.

It was unfortunate that the field was in the shape it was in but let us remember that both teams had to play under the adverse conditions. Mr. Shively, the University's athletic director, tried all possible avenues to try to dry the field.

The game was designated as Kentucky's Homecoming and as such the halftime show was set up around that theme. This type of treatment was extended to Kentucky's Marching 100 when it went to Nashville several weeks ago and is customary at any Homecoming game within the conference or nation. The only particularly brilliant thing about the UT band was the majorette corps.

Although Lexington and the state's citizens were glad to have the Tennessee visitors, the University has no control over the Phoenix Hotel and its rates, although the prices quoted do seem a bit out of hand.

Mr. Siler failed miserably to inform his readers of the full story on his being turned away from Coach Rupp's basketball practice Saturday morning.

Rupp informed the Knoxville journalist that the session was a closed practice and no one would be allowed to watch the workout. Disgusted with this answer from the Baron, Siler collared Mr. Ken Kuhn, Kentucky's sports publicity director, and asked him if he (Kuhn) didn't think he (Siler) was being discriminated against?

Kuhn told him NO, that it was never the practice of Coach Rupp to allow foreign newspapermen as spectators at a workout.

Siler's rumor was ill-founded on the Wildcats learning to shoot a new style free throw.

If the Kentucky-Tennessee relations are at a low ebb it is only because the Volunteers put Tom Siler's heart on a spit.

'Hutch' Named

Kentucky's Tom Hutchinson has been named on the United Press All-SEC first team for his second such honor of the season. Previously he had been named to the UPI All-SEC.

Others on the squad were Bill Neighbors, Alabama, and Jim Dunaway, Ole Miss—Tackles; Roy Winsor, LSU, and Dave Watson, Ga. Tech.—guards; Lee Roy Jordan, Alabama—center; Pat Trammell, Alabama, Billy Ray Adams, Ole Miss, Jerry Stovall, LSU, and Mike Fracchia, Alabama—backs. The other end was Dave Edwards, Auburn.

West Berlin Opera Signs Former Faculty Member

A former University assistant professor of music will make his debut in January with the Berlin German Opera in West Berlin.

James A. King has signed a 2½ year contract with the West Berlin company, considered one of the greatest opera houses of the world.

A native of Dodge City, Kansas, King was a member of the UK faculty from 1952 until his resignation last spring. He taught music humanities courses, gave private voice instruction, and directed the Men's Glee Club.

While at UK, he sang in several operettas and gave recitals in the Musgrave Series. He also directed the choirs of three Lexington churches.

This fall, King went to Florence, Italy to sing in the opera "Tosca" and to sing a series of European auditions. The tenor was awarded the contract after his second audition. He will take the leading roles in "Lohengrin," "A Masked Ball," "Carmen," "Boris Godounov," "Ariadne auf Naxos," and "Rosenkavalier."

"It is a thing I had always hoped for but never felt I could really expect," King said.

Presently in Lexington with his wife and two sons, King will go to Berlin in early January. In his first guest appearance while under the contract, he will return to New York to sing in "Ariadne" at Town Hall with the Little Orchestra Society, April 9.

The contract with the Berlin German Opera calls for King to be available 8½ months of the year in Berlin, gives him two months to make guest appearances, and provides for a six-week paid vacation.

LESSON 4 - Why men watch girls

Men watch girls for various reasons. Personally, we need no better reason than the reason men climb mountains. They are there. We have heard old men say they watch girls because it makes them feel younger and young men because it makes them feel older (see above). While investigating the reasons why men watch girls we picked up a clue from, of all things, a bird watcher. He told us that he formerly had been a flower watcher. Then one day a Speckle-Breasted Jackdaw happened to land in his garden as he was watching a calla lily and he noticed that the bird moved. He switched to birds on the spot. Girl watchers have discovered that girls enjoy this same advantage (movement) over calla lilies. (Speaking of advantages, how about Pall Mall's natural mildness?)
